Product Description

"William Tell Told Again" is a humorous short story by P.G. Wodehouse, it is a comedic retelling of the famous Swiss legend of William Tell, known for his remarkable skill in archery, particularly for shooting an apple off his son’s head as a test of precision. For instance, the characters in Wodehouse’s version are often portrayed as bumbling or clueless, and their actions are exaggerated for comedic effect. It's a short and enjoyable piece for fans of Wodehouse’s humour, showcasing his ability to take a well-established story and infuse it with a fresh, humorous perspective
