About the Author

Edgar Rice Burroughs

Edgar Rice Burroughs (1875–1950) was a prolific American author renowned for his adventure stories, especially Tarzan and the John Carter of Mars series. His novel The Oakdale Affair (1918) explores mystery and crime, following a young woman caught in dangerous circumstances involving hidden identities and thrilling twists. Known for his imaginative worlds and dynamic characters, Burroughs brought excitement and innovation to adventure literature, making him a lasting figure in popular fiction.

Product Description

A Princess of Mars is a science fiction novel written by Edgar Rice Burroughs, first serialized in 1912 and published as a book in 1917. It is the first book in the Barsoom series. The story follows John Carter, a Civil War veteran mysteriously transported to Mars (called Barsoom by its inhabitants). There, he discovers advanced civilizations, battles fierce creatures, and falls in love with Dejah Thoris, a Martian princess. The novel combines adventure, romance, and imaginative science fiction, introducing readers to a richly detailed Martian world.
