About the Author

Roma Mitra

Dr. Roma Mitra Debnath is an Associate Professor at the Indian Institute of Public Administration (IIPA), New Delhi, specializing in Applied Statistics. An alumna of Delhi University, she works in Industrial Statistics, Six Sigma, Design of Experiments, Taguchi Designs, and Total

Quality Management. Her interdisciplinary research spans sectors such as education, banking, telecom, agriculture, hospitality, and public administration, and has been published by Elsevier, Springer, Sage, and Emerald, receiving awards including Best Research Paper from Emerald Group UK. At IIPA, she integrates evidence-based, skill-oriented, and data-driven approaches into curriculum and capacity-building programs, preparing public administrators for practical policy challenges.

Product Description

This book aims to explore the significance of regional literature in highlighting public policy and administration in ancient India. It seeks to strengthen the self-esteem and independence of adolescent girls, providing them with valuable insights and engaging content for their research. The book had been thoughtfully authored not only in English but also in regional languages such as Tamil, Malayalam, Marathi, and Odia to ensure wider dissemination and to capture the rich diversity of India's heritage and ancient culture.
